WHITE COLLAR CRIMINAL DEFENSE & BUSINESS LITIGATION

The Lawyers' Lawyers of Litigation

Like any boutique business, the team at Jones & Hawley PC has carved a niche in delivering a finely tuned skill set for just the right occasions.

"We're the go-to law firm when other attorneys need separate counsel or specific proficiency in a certain area," says Co-founder Doug Jones.

The widely experienced team is most often tapped for cases involving white collar criminal defense, business litigation and False Claims Act cases, environmental law, and probate litigation. Though just three attorneys deep, the trio packs a powerful punch.

"We're extremely efficient," says Shareholder Chris Nicholson. "Our reputation among our peers is strong because we deliver big-firm quality for a small-firm cost. We take the ego out of our partnerships."

TRACK RECORD OF SUCCESS

Jones & Hawley is known for litigation, but its first goal is to serve the client, whose goal might be to avoid litigation.

"We are focused on client goals and client expectations. We are focused on solving problems. We are focused on sophisticated strategies. We are focused on results. But when the client cannot avoid litigation, we are focused on winning," says Co-founder Greg Hawley, whose long-standing clients have followed him throughout his career.

Since 2004, Jones has served as a court-appointed General Special Master in overseeing the environmental cleanup of PCB contamination in Anniston, Alabama. "Having broad litigation experience in both state and federal courts plays a key role in being successful in the type of complex cases we handle," he says. "In white collar cases, we have extensive experience representing businesses and individuals at every stage of a criminal proceeding as well as helping clients navigate the often blurred lines between civil, administrative, and criminal offenses."

The firm's agility is further demonstrated in its ability to handle both plaintiff and defense whistleblower cases, particularly those involving large volumes of documents. "We've recently seen a lot of healthcare and pharmaceutical cases in this area," says Nicholson. "Much of our success results from being good team players—as a firm and together with our clients. We stay on our toes and embrace new challenges.

"There's never a dull moment at our firm."
