Without expert medical care, varicose veins will continue to worsen, but they can be comfortably treated with minimally invasive, in-office procedures that require no downtime. The key is selecting the most skilled, knowledgeable hands.

“Veins that no longer function properly become aesthetically unattractive, but they also present significant health risks,” says board-certified diagnostic and interventional radiologist Dr. Michael Bischoff, Founder and Medical Director of Beaumont Vein Center - Sterling

Heights, who draws upon years of experience in diagnostic evaluations and endovascular (within the vein) procedures to care for patients seeking relief.

“Using detailed, diagnostic ultrasound mapping of the veins, followed by a customized treatment plan, we can restore healthier circulation and erase superficial bulging veins and spider veins, creating results that are cosmetically satisfying and long-lasting.

“We educate patients and only recommend interventions we feel are necessary. Being part of Beaumont Hospital - Troy, referrals are seamless if we detect a health condition that would best be handled by a different specialist.”

Accredited in Vein Patient Care

Beaumont Vein Center - Sterling Heights is fully accredited by the Intersocietal Accreditation Commission (IAC) as a vein center. Beaumont Vein Center - Sterling Heights is one of only two IAC Vein Center Accredited Facilities in Michigan and currently the only one in Greater Detroit.

“I have a great staff that receives many compliments from patients. Together, we work every day to not just maintain those high IAC standards but to exceed them,” says Dr. Bischoff. “We are always pleased to receive word-of-mouth referrals, as they are evidence we are meeting our goals.”
